Market Commentary

Markets recovered well during October as excessive pessimism and bearish positioning gave way to the increasing likelihood that central banks may start to temper rate hikes. Growth is slowing and inflation is in the process of peaking. Monetary policy has become restrictive, allowing central banks to become more data-dependent. While the US Federal Reserve and European Central Bank hiked rates 75bps at their last meetings, both indicated that the pace of hikes may slow. The US and European PMI's, an indicator of forecast economic activity, signal a contraction ahead. Some Central banks are starting to worry that excessive tightness may cause financial instability as housing markets are slowing rapidly. The Reserve Bank of Australia and the Bank of Canada both surprised the market with smaller rate hikes than expected.

While inflation data remains elevated, there are increasing signs of a peak in price pressures. In Europe, energy prices have fallen as gas reserves increased and hot weather kept energy usage lower than expected. The shift in spending from goods to services is also weighing on goods-related prices. Household spending is in decent shape, as jobs continue to grow and labour markets remain tight, while wage pressures remain high.

The 20th Party Congress in China provided a few negative surprises. New leadership was unveiled consisting of Xi Jinping loyalists, which lessens the likelihood of dissenting voices and increases the risk of policy mistakes. Markets reacted negatively as no mention was made at the conference of easing the zero-covid policy or providing more substantial support to property developers. Markets were also concerned with the increasing focus on safety and security as well as Taiwan's unification in Xi's speech. However, post the conference, rumours that the Covid restrictions will be eased have boosted markets. We expect policies to ease gradually over the coming months. Given the weak growth environment, authorities will need to provide further fiscal, monetary, and credit easing, in our view.

In South Africa, the medium-term budget surprised to the upside with strong revenue over-runs along with fiscal discipline. Debt to GDP is now expected to peak around 7%, below the previous forecast peak of 75%. We expect the SARB to signal smaller rate hike increments at the coming meeting. However, the growth outlook has softened and consumers are feeling the pain of high inflation, higher interest rates, and unemployment.

The All Share index rose 4.9% in rand terms during October. Bonds lagged, with the ALBI up 1.1%, and the Rand weakened by 1.5% to 18.35 versus the US dollar, its fifth straight month of declines. Financials (+12.8%) outperformed resources (+3.7%) and industrials (+1.7%). Key sector leaders were Banks (+16.0%), Tobacco (+11.5%), Health Care (+11.0%), and key stocks Capitec +23.3% and Standard Bank (+19.2). The laggard was Tech (-15.6%) with Naspers and Prosus down -15.8% and -16.2% respectively. MSCI SA rose 2.9% in October, outperforming MSCI EM (-3.1%) but behind MSCI World (+7.2%) in US dollar terms.

The Assegai fund rose 3.0% during October. Long positions in Sappi (+2%), Harmony (+1.7%), Capitec (+1.5%), Anheuser Busch (+1.2%), and Impala (+1.1%) and a short position in Telkom (+1%) contributed most to performance in the month. A short position in Investec (-2.9%) and long positions in Prosus (-1.8%) and Naspers (-1.3%) detracted the most. Short positions in Clicks (-0.8%) and Tiger Brands (-0.8%) also detracted during October.
